PREFACE.

FELLOW-MEMBERS OF 1913:

We believe that the compilation and publication of the accompanying biographical data will prove of interest and value to each one of our number who is desirous of maintaining the friendly and filial relation that should exist between alumni and their Alma Mater. It will be of interest to those who have resolved not to so forget themselves in their business and professional ventures as to selfishly forget or neglect all ties that bind them to the body of men with whom they were associated through the four critical years of undergraduate life. It will be of value in encouraging such to establish a more intimate knowledge and relationship with the other members of the class and of thus widening the circle of personal interests as they watch for and follow the success and growth of the other '13 men.

The insufficiency and incorrectness of the data at our disposal, although somewhat anticipated, were much to be regretted by the editors. Successive attempts were made to reach every enrolled member so that our facts might be obtained first-hand; these failed in quite a large number of cases, and the facts were therefore supplied out of a limited knowledge.

This work is being published in a gala day of Rutgers spirit when enthusiasm over the completion of 150 years of a most serviceful and honorable history and over the anticipation of continued long years of usefulness has stirred all to fresh resolutions of fidelity and devotion. May the men of 1913 show themselves to be lacking nothing in their reassertion of loyalty and the fulfillment of their vows of faithful allegiance to Rutgers.

That this collection of historical data may prove valuable as an incentive for a more permanent and distinctive class unity, and that it may serve as another link in the chain of common and binding interests that we are forging year by year, reunion by reunion, is the sincere and mutual wish of—

THE EDITORS.

A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT.

Classmates of 1913, I extend to you a word of greeting. Our class history is written as a part of the anniversary celebration of our Alma Mater. As yet we may not have accomplished much. The years since we have passed from old Rutgers have been too few. I trust, however, that we are all beginning to see success in the future, and that we are learning to appreciate the benefits of the days spent at Rutgers. For this is a time of the reawakening of the spirit which all her sons feel. May that reawakening extend to each of us of the class of 1913. May our devotion and loyalty to her be shown by lining up to the standard which she sets for her men; by our banding together closer as a class and doing our part in assisting in her advancement and development. Let us not let the passing of time affect the spirit which we have now, but let us strive to return year by year to renew old ties and friendships and to hold in remembrance our duties to our Alma Mater.

F. J. JOHNSON, President.

UNDERGRADUATE HISTORY.

The undergraduate history of any class is only a succession of memories. And now, looking backward through the experienced eyes of three-years-out-of-college, we can smile indulgently at incidents and accidents which, in those earlier days we were wont to consider with all the tense seriousness of actuality.

Take that first night in New Brunswick, for instance. The events pass in swift review like some "movie" we have once seen, but recall only dimly. The shadowed trip across lots to the rear of the gym, the atmosphere of expectant courage, the mingling of many voices, the triumphant, vibrating class yell,—all these, and more, seem but pictures which we sense only dimly and of which we were not a part. But those memories! Time cannot dim them, for they came at an impressionable age when we stood on the brink of a new order of things.

Looking backward, we realize now that our class was very much like other classes; one hundred and twenty-odd boys, thrown together as a class unit, each individual destined to form friendships which constitute the most pleasant feature of college life. After that first night, we grew to know each other better. The year wore away; we fought side by side in the various class rushes, and felt a swelling pride in the fact that five of our classmates won the coveted varsity letter in foot-ball. Together, we struggled through the "mid-years," watched regretfully while some fell by the wayside, and then struck out again confidently, smaller, but more unified.

At the beginning of the second year, rejoicing in the newly acquired freedom of the Sophomore, we swaggered a bit, supremely secure in the self-satisfaction which comes only once in a lifetime. But we got over it eventually, and, as Juniors, smoked our pipes more thoughtfully and watched with speculative eyes the passing of the collegiate year. We began to make ourselves felt, and edited a Scarlet Letter which has been a model for ensuing volumes.

Finally, the Senior year rolled around. We led the college to victory on the gridiron, diamond, and track; took our places as leaders of the undergraduate body; directed the trend of student life. One of our members gave Rutgers a new song book. We began to feel vaguely the new responsibilities, to sense dimly the call to the work for which the college had been training us. The soft clay of us had been moulded, gently, without us knowing, until at graduation we stood forth—finished products.

That is the undergraduate history of the class of 1913. A succession of memories made more real with the passing years! Like other classes, to be sure, but more sacred, more vitally alive, more to be cherished, because it is our class of which we are integral parts!

GRADUATE HISTORY.

The men of 1913 are still young as alumni, too young to have more than fairly started on their professional and business careers, and yet many of them have shown a spirit of ambition and determination that promises well for their ultimate success. As is the case with all classes, our men have scattered widely and may be found anywhere between "dear old Broadway" and the street of Shanghai, China, where "Billie" Ball is dispensing oil to the yellow race.

As far as it is possible to estimate from the information at hand, an approximate allotment of the men among the various professions would be as follows: Ministers 5, Doctors 2, Lawyers 4, Teachers 15, Farmers 9, Journalists 6, Insurance 2, Municipal activity 1, Chemists 8, Ceramists 2, Mechanical Engineers 7, Electrical Engineers 3, Civil Engineers 10, other lines of business 50.

One thing especially commendable about the graduate life of the class is the fact that we have held a reunion each year at Commencement time, and each has been reasonably well supported. The first reunion was held on June 13, 1914 in the form of a business meeting and banquet at Hotel Klein, with about twenty-five members present. President Johnson presided in the chair and the following resolutions were adopted: (1) That each member be assessed fifteen dollars, payable within the next five years, and that this amount be given by the Class of 1913 at its first five-year reunion to the Athletic Association with a recommendation that it be applied on a fund for the erection of a Field House. (2) That a committee be appointed to consult with other classes and college authorities concerning the changing of Alumni Day so as to provide for a more general participation of classes in the festivities of the day. (3) That a representative of the class be chosen to report for the Alumni Quarterly. (4) That a vote of thanks be extended to the reunion and banquet committee for their efforts.

Harold W. Schenck was elected class representative for the QUARTERLY.

The following officers were reelected to serve for life: President, Frederick J. Johnson; Vice President, Theodore Van Winkle; Secretary, Harold W. Schenck; Treasurer, George R. Merrill.

After the completion of the business meeting, each member tried out as an impromptu speechmaker, faithfully swearing allegiance to class interests and promising hearty cooperation in all future reunions.

The second reunion of the class was held on Monday evening preceding the 1915 Commencement. In the afternoon, sixteen men dressed as sailors did their part to make the Alumni Parade a success. The dinner was held in the Quad room of Winants Hall at 7.30, with twenty-three men present. After an enjoyable "feed" a business meeting was called to order by President Johnson. E. R. Silvers reported for the Alumni Parade Committee, and Harold W. Schenck for the Dinner Committee, while George Merrill reported as Treasurer. The question of the class gift on the fifth reunion was discussed. The Class went on record as favoring the Saturday preceding Commencement as the best day on which to hold the Alumni Parade.

The third annual reunion was held Monday, June 12, 1916, at 6.30 in Winants Hall, and was successful in that eighteen of the class were present, while almost thirty of them were able to be present sometime during the Commencement festivities. Earl R. Silvers acted as chairman of the meeting. A motion was passed that the reunion in October be held in some place other than Winants Hall. The resolutions drawn up on the death of Lambert Jenkins Leonard were officially acted upon by the class. It was moved that a Committee be appointed to consider the award of a silver loving cup to that member of the class who could claim the first boy baby. Several stirring speeches were given, a strong class spirit characterizing the meeting.

310 Monastery Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

John H. S. (Put) Putnam, son of Eleanor Elizabeth Stowits and Jacob Fremont Putnam, a manufacturer, was born in Canjoharie, N. Y., August 25, 1887. Early residences were at Canjoharie, and St. Johnsville, N. Y., and Fairfield, Conn. He attended the Canjoharie Grammar School and graduated from the St. Johnsville High School in 1908, but lost two years between these two courses because of the weak condition of his eyes. While in college he won the First Barbour Prize in Declamation, First Myron Smith Memorial Prize, and Second Irving S. #### GEORGE HERBERT RAMSEY.

On the maternal side his uncle, grandfather and great-grandfather were all physicians. He received his early schooling in the Olean schools, graduating from the High School with honors in 1909. While in college he was reporter for the Targum and Business Manager of the same publication, was Literary Editor of the 1913 Scarlet Letter, Assistant Manager of the track team, and Vice President of the Philoclean Literary Society. He pursued the classical course, received the degree of A.B., and is now a medical student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, making his home at 334 West 56th Street, New York City. Doc is a member of Beta Theta Pi and Nu Sigma Nu fraternities. He is connected with the First Presbyterian Church of Olean, N. Y., and is a Republican in politics.

JACK CHOB RICHER.

93 Bruce St., Newark, N. J.

Jack Chob Richer, son of Barnett Chob Richer, clothing manufacturer, and Minnie Dorothy Kass' Chob Richer, was born on January 15, 1893. We are taking Chobby's word for it that his ancestry consisted of a "long line of Rabbis and Musicians on mother's side as far back as 1603. Female ancestors all married very young. Paternal grandfather and great grandfather were each centenarians, big, large men." Which probably accounts for Chobby's massive frame.

Jack, as he now calls himself, spent all his life in Newark, which event was probably duly commemorated in the 250th Anniversary Celebration of that city. He graduated from Barringer High School and attended the 13th Avenue Evening High School from 1907 to 1909. In recording the events of note in his childhood, we must again quote Chobby. "Best mathematician in every class in every school, also prize orator and debater in high school for three years. Founded eight different literary and debating clubs, four of which are still existing. Met with many accidents in childhood, runaways, falls, escapades, etc. Great fighter and scrapper while in grammar school. Jumped through third story window to escape beating; unhurt except slight bruises. Cut tongue in two with putty-blower; run over by wagon while attempting to stop runaway." All of which goes to show that you can't keep a good man down.

While in college, he continued his wonderful record. He won the Freshman Speaking Prize, was a varsity debater and a Junior Orator, crowning his career by election into Phi Beta Kappa. His chief athletic honor consisted in breaking all world's records for a fifty yard dash down Somerset Street at 9.30 in the evening.

After graduation, Chobby attended the New Jersey Law School which still counts him among its most distinguished students. It is very probable that no other member of the school has had his tongue cut in two or has organized eight literary societies, four of which are still existing.

From June 1913 to September 1914, Chobby was secretary to the manager of the Edison Chemical Works, at Silver Lake, N. J.; from September 1914, to March 1915, he was head of the Stenography and Mathematics Departments of the Long Island Business College, at Brooklyn, N. Y., and from March 1915 to the present time he has been office manager of the Meyer Engineering Company of Newark.

Honors continued to fall upon him after graduation. He is now president of the Literary Bachelors Club, president of The Forum, president of the Spectator Club, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Young Folks Civic League, and president of the Freshman Class (1918) of the New Jersey Law School.

Chobby writes that he is not married as yet, and that he has no relatives among the Rutgers Alumni. But he jocularly remarks: "Am the first of a long line (perhaps)." He is also an author, having edited the Engineering Catalogue, Meyer Fan System, Price and Lee, 1915.

But this isn't all. He has other achievements. Listen! "Considered among the younger element of the city a leader in connection with literary, civic and debating clubs. Wide range of accomplishments, all in pairs, viz., stenographer and accountant, mathematician and statistician, pianist and violinist, orator and debater." In conclusion Chobby writes upon his questionnaire: "Have already given more than a modest man should. Will, therefore, say nothing more."

Oh, modesty, what crimes are committed in thy name!

His fraternity is Delta Upsilon. Upon graduation from college with the degree of B. A., Fat took three years in the New Brunswick Theological Seminary and three years in the N. Y. University Graduate School.

He received his A.M. degree from N. Y. U., in June, 1915. He was licensed and ordained by the Classis of Newark, N. J., on May 19, 1916, and was ordained as pastor of the Franklin Reformed Church, of Nutley, N. J., in June, 1916. During the summers he has been inspector for the Union County, N. J., Mosquito Extermination Commission, and has supplied pulpits of the Watchung, N. J., Union Church and the Middle Collegiate Church of New York City. He is a member of the New York Phi Beta Kappa Alumni, of the New York Delta Upsilon Club, and the American Sociological Society. He is connected with the Dutch Reformed Church, votes for "the best man and the country's interest," and states that his hobby is Sociology and that he enjoys all sports. Fat is related to the following Rutgers men: Jacob W. Schenck '70, (deceased), Isaac S. Schenck '73 (deceased), Cornelius Schenck '79, Willard E. Schenck '10 (deceased) and Cornelious F. Schenck '13. He has contributed frequently to the Christian Intelligencer and is the author of "The Influence of Religious Environment on Social Efficiency," his Master's Thesis. Since graduation he has been eminently active in all class matters.

HOMER LEWIS SHEFFER.

Port Ewen, N. Y.

Homer L. (Shef) Sheffer, son of Mary Elizabeth Proper, and Philip Alfred Sheffer, was born in Linlithgo, Columbia County, N. Y. He first attended the grades in the Linlithgo school, and later the Hudson High School, where he graduated in 1909. He pursued the classical course in college and graduated with high honors, taking the degree of A.B. J., Reformed Chapel for the year 1914-1915, and had charge of the Napanoch, N. Y., Reformed Church during the summer of 1915. As to politics, Shef claims that he "has no party affiliations" and his hobbies are Sociology, tennis, and all aquatic sports. Before entering college he lived at Athens, N. Y., where he attended the Athens Union Free District School, and Brooklyn, where he attended the Brooklyn Boys' High School, from which he graduated in 1908. He made a splendid start in college by receiving first honorary mention in the Freshman Oratorical Contest because of his eloquent delivery of "Spartacus to the Gladiators." C., a member of the Junior Prom. Committee and the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. In the fall track meet of 1908, he won first prize in the high jump.
